Financial and Commercial

New York, March 20 (AP)—The stock market suffered another substantial sell-off today on expanding volume and, at the worst, declines ran to 3 or more points with virtually all rails and industrials under pressure.

Dealings, slow at the start, picked up around midday when offerings, for a brief interval, were quite urgent. The pace again slowed and extreme setbacks were reduced in the majority of cases near the fourth hour.

Again the good war news inspired reconversion pessimism and many customers shelved their accounts on the idea the high average mark for nearly eight years, registered early this month, might hold as a peak for 1945. Talk of Washington stiffening regulation of speculation revived as a bearish influence. Earnings, dividends and idle investment funds remained as aids to sentiment.

Conspicuous on the retreat were Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Atlantic Coast Line, Reading, M-K-T Preferred, Best & Co., U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Goodyear, American Smelting, Standard Oil (N. J.), Laclede Gas Preferred, International Telephone, Sears Roebuck and du Pont. Utilities were narrow, with American Telephone, American Water Works and Consolidated Edison about unchanged.

Bonds were mixed and commodities easier.

Charles W. Walton, Former Senator, Died Here Monday

his ability and standing. He had a wide range of practical experience in law and was counsel for the board of the Hudson river regulating district and for the Lake Champlain bridge commission. During the construction of the Ashokan Reservoir and later in the development of the Rondout water project he represented a very wide circle of claimants and was very successful in that field.

Charles W. Walton maintained offices at 280 Wall street where Judge Clearwater had previously been located and later the offices were moved to the Kingston Trust Company building at Fair and Main streets.

Republican Stalwart

Throughout his life Mr. Walton had always been a stalwart Republican and in 1914 he was elected state senator from the 29th District, which comprised the counties of Ulster, Greene and Delaware counties. He served eight years in the state senate and his progressive ideas were instrumental in having written on the statute books some of the most important of laws.

While chairman of the conservation committee, which he headed for three years, he introduced a large number of bills for extending the scope of the Conservation Department and saw them entered into laws. For four years following he was chairman of the senate committee on codes and while acting in that capacity he completed simplification of the Civil Practice Act of the State of New York after it had been dragging over a period of more than 20 years.

In 1921 he introduced a measure for the creation of a joint commission to examine the corporation laws of the state and simplify and coordinate such laws and procedures. The bill was successful and today the New York state corporation laws are a model for all states. In 1920 he was made chairman of another commission, which came into existence as a result of a bill he introduced, a commission created to examine state laws relative to child welfare, to investigate their effects and to propose remedial legislation. The direct outcome was the establishment of the children's court and courts of domestic relations as separate parts of existing courts, a constitutional amendment introduced by him for that purpose being enacted into law in 1921.

Again in 1922 another of his bills provided for establishment of Children's Courts in all counties except New York, Chatauqua, Monroe, Ontario and parts of Erie and Onondaga and in the same year another of his bills which succeeded provided for the establishment and defined the duties and powers of Boards of Child Welfare.

Interested in Local Affairs

Always interested in local affairs, Senator Walton worked for many laws which brought to his constituents important benefits. The Rondout Creek Bridge across the Rondout creek to Port Ewen was under way when the World War came. He sought to have it completed, knowing of its importance to the people of this locality as well as its need by those who passed through Kingston en route to surrounding areas. Work had been suspended on the bridge because of the war but he sought an appropriation for its completion. As a result of his activities, he asked for an appropriation of $420,000, the money was made available and the bridge completed. Ulster county had long been a producer of currants and when the white pine blister rust and currant rust came along there was threat to this important crop which brought considerable income to fruit growers in the Hudson valley. He secured legislation to enable the state to fight this disease and the currant industry of two counties was saved.

When Judge G.D.B. Hasbrouck resigned as Supreme Court justice, Senator Walton was nominated by the Republican party, the late Judge A. T. Clearwater making the nominating speech, but Mr. Walton was unsuccessful at the November, 1930, election. John T. Loughran, of Kingston, now a judge of the Court of Appeals, was elected to the Supreme Court that fall and was later to become a member of the higher court.

Active in Bar Associations

Senator Walton was a very active member of the American Bar Association and since 1922 had served as secretary of the New York State Bar Association, having been again re-elected last year to the office. He was a member of the Ulster County Bar Association, Albany County Bar Association, the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the New York County Lawyers Association.

He was an active member of the Fair Street Reformed Church of this city and had served as a member of its official board and was a member of the Great Consistory.

Throughout his life Senator Walton was always keenly interested in everything that touched the welfare and progress of the city along moral, cultural and material lines. He was a member of Lake Katrine Grange, the National Republican Club, Kingston Club, Fort Orange Club and Twaalfskill Club. Fraternally he was a member of Kingston Lodge, No. 550, B.P.O.E.; Kingston Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M., the Chapter, council and consistory as well as Cyprus Temple of the Mystic Shrine. He was a member and past commander of Tappen Camp No. 1, Sons of Veterans.

Mr. Walton was well known in financial circles and was a director of the former Kingston National Bank and later a director of the Kingston Trust Company, its successor.

Had Wide Practice

Senator Walton had a wide practice of the law and had been admitted to practice in the United States District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals. He had always stood firm for the upholding of all laws and strict application of the principles of justice and exemplified in his conduct the lofty ideals of his profession. He was a man of broad sympathies and kindly nature, he was true friend of the oppressed and the unfortunate and one of his salient attributes was his love for children. He was a great lover of the out-doors and his summer home in the town of Olive was one of his greatest sources of relaxation and pleasure. In the library of his summer home is one of the finest collections of preserved specimens of wild life of the mountains.

As an organizer and leader he was sought out many times to head local benefits. In February, 1942, he was named to succeed the late Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck as Ulster county chairman of the Red Cross and he gave freely of his time and ability in the furtherance of this great work.

In the passing of Senator Walton the city and county as well as the legal profession has lost a man of great ability and a man who was highly respected by people from all walks of life. He was a keen student of human nature and an excellent judge of human values.

Besides his wife, Belle Van Keuren Walton, he is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Ray Allen, a teacher in the Woodstock school, and Mrs. William Frost of Bearsville.

Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Sarah E. O'Brien, who departed one year ago, March 20, 1944.

Patiently she bore her suffering,
Smiling through her pain,
Softly came the call from heaven,
Bringing peace like gentle rain.
Memory keeps our loved one near us,
Though she passed away one year ago.

VICTORY GARDENS

U. S. victory strategy depends upon 20,000,000 victory gardens here at home this year. Each one, including yours, will be needed, in addition to our farm and commercial food production of foodstuffs to cope with the tremendous task of feeding the war and the home fronts.

To help you do your part for food, fitness and final victory on our fighting fronts, The Freeman is publishing daily a victory garden-graph by Dean Halliday, Central Press Association's garden expert.

The nation's gardeners, both professional and amateur, but especially the latter, are reassured by the news that they may have extra gasoline rations again this year, wherever travel is necessary in operating their gardens. The value of such planting is as great as ever. And it hardly needs to be said that the rewards of such activity—whether for food or for health—are beyond price.

SPEAKING OF BRAINS

"Yanks Bomb Nazi Brain Center" says a headline. Meaning German army headquarters. And it's a good enough caption in its way. Only nearly every fellow who reads it is likely, just now, to exclaim "Yanks bomb what?" For Nazis lately are not showing much evidence of brains, central or otherwise.

They fumbled their job at the Rhine bridgehead, and they have been fumbling ever since. They are now being hit so hard, and so often, and in so many places, that after every blow they find it more difficult to get started again.

The most illuminating observation about those supermen is that the Nazi brains "have gone underground." It seems rather reasonable. And it can't be long now until the whole Nazi outfit is underground.

The Japs, however, are another story—which will be finished in due time. They have less cleverness than the Germans, but plenty of tenacity.

GENERALS

President Roosevelt has named nine new four-star generals, making 11 altogether, in addition to the four entitled to wear five stars: Marshall, Eisenhower, MacArthur and Arnold. Five-star generals are new in American history. four-star generals before this war, the United States has had only seven: Washington, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Pershing, March and Bliss, as against 15 now holding this or higher rank.

Here is a recognition that today's war is about twice as taxing as all the country's previous wars put together.

TOKYO DIES

Tokyo is a symbol, and a grim and terrible one. Like Gomorrah of old, for its sins it is destroyed by fire from heaven. Day after day and night after night, in great pillars of smoke and flame, it has written against the skies the awesome story of its punishment.

The Japanese were intelligent men. Their leaders knew what they were doing, and knew that it was wicked. They knew that America had done them no harm and given them no cause for war. They knew—or at least the leaders whom the masses blindly followed knew—that with right behavior they might have lived and prospered along with their American neighbors, indefinitely through the years. They deliberately chose the way of crime. And so what might have become a great and noble nation, playing a distinguished part in the development of the modern world, has made itself by its crimes a nation with which it is impossible to live in peace and friendship.

The die is cast, and retribution follows inevitably. Earthly fire has become hell fire. The great city of Tokyo is wiped out. The nation that built it is in its death throes. The city that was will be only a memory, and the nation that might have been has died by its own hand.

SOWING AND REAPING

It was doubtless foredoomed that the great German adventure for world domination, which began in crime and hysteria, should end in the same way. It was foretold long ago, in a book that the Nazis scorned.

"Be not deceived," it said. "God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

In war time people may rise superior even to red tape.

'These Days'

By George E. Sokolsky

ARABIA

In his report to Congress on Yalta, the President said:

"Of the problems of Arabia, I learned more about that whole problem, the Moslem problem, the Jewish problem, by talking with Ibn Saud for five minutes, than I could have learned in exchange of two or three dozen letters."

This is an astonishing achievement because this particular problem is some 2,000 years old and nobody has yet been able to solve it. Great minds have devoted their entire lives to it but without effective achievement. The prophet Isaiah concerned himself with it and sang "When the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." And Jeremiah cried:

"Declare ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem; "And say, 'Blow ye the trumpet in the land: "Cry, gather together and say, "'Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defenced cities.'

"Set up the standard toward Zion:'"

And so it has been since those days. Man is not easily torn from his mooring and the older the tree, the deeper and stronger the roots. The sons of Ishmael remained in the desert while the sons of Jacob were scattered to every land. At my own wedding in Shanghai was a Chinese Jew from Khotan, indistinguishable from other Chinese except for his beard. He insisted upon orthodox Jewish rites. Also present were several Jews from India whose ancestors had been in that land before Christ appeared in the Garden of Gethsemane. Who can understand the historic force that in a universal rhythm tears this Jewish people asunder and throws them violently together again. And always before them is the reality or the mirage of Jerusalem?

It is amazing to me that Ibn Saud could, in five minutes, explain to President Roosevelt the mystery of the millions of Jews who have adhered to a religion, to a community of kind, in spite of actual and provable dissimilarities. What mystic power keeps this people together when there is no tangible, no visible, no provable relationship? The whole of Jewish history is a challenging record of diffusion from Abraham, the Canaanite, to Theodore Herzel, the Viennese journalist who discovered his affinity for his own people only when he attended the trial of Alfred Dreyfuss, the Alsatian officer in the French Army who only became conscious of his Jewishness when he was persecuted for being one.

If every Jew now in Palestine were driven from that country and all the lands and all the buildings were given to the Arab, history then would start all over again. In every country, the Jews would divide into three elements: Those who would fanatically devote themselves to Zion; those who would oppose Zion as an outmoded shibboleth; and those who would secretly love Zion and outwardly wear the garb of opposition. This is such an old pattern. Actually, it is the pattern that kept Moses in the desert for 40 years. And those who love Zion will be the most articulate and pressing because theirs is a positive design for life. The two boys who assassinated Lord Moyne in Egypt sought martyrdom; they were their own prosecutors at their trial. They wanted to die for Zion because the Valley of the Jordan was their only love. Such a mystery no man can grasp in five minutes of conversation.

Lord Balfour and Woodrow Wilson tried to find a solution and curiously they nearly did. They sought it in a mutuality between Jews and Arabs under the aegis of Great Britain. Had their plan not been discarded, millions of Jews might have moved from eastern Europe to the colonies in Palestine and even Transjordania and Hitler would have had no excuse for his miserable racialism. Instead, Zion has been kicked about in the politics of snide vote-gatherers and is now a damned thing, a nuisance, a discarded wanton. Zion will not be represented at San Francisco. And yet, Zion will live on long after San Francisco is only another Tilsit where once also the affairs of the earth were permanently settled. For obviously, Zion is the promise of God and no two men can undo it in five minutes of conversation.

INDIGESTION IN CHILDREN

One of the distressing ailments of children is chronic intestinal indigestion. It would seem that despite all efforts of the physician and the use of special diets the small intestine refuses to absorb the nourishment from the foods eaten and the unabsorbed food causes the various symptoms present. That our new friends the vitamins may prove helpful in the treatment of these cases is pointed out by Dr. J. H. Baumhauser in the Alabama State Medical Journal, Montgomery. Dr. Baumhauser states that it is the fat and starch foods that are hard to absorb and so cause most of the symptoms.

Children with chronic indigestion of small intestine have little or no appetite, fail to gain weight, are late learning to sit, stand and walk, are fretful, dislike play, have diarrhoea, repeated nose, throat and chest infections, and poor sleeping habits. "The child is irritable, languid and easily fatigued. Sleep is usually restless, with frequent grinding of the teeth, outcries, dreaming and not infrequently night terrors. There may be also tingling pains in forearms and legs with spasms of muscles and convulsions."

The treatment suggested by Dr. Baumhauser, after a close study of thirty cases, is injections of vitamin B complex and liver extract. The injections are given weekly: 0.25 cc of B complex in one buttock and 0.5 cc of liver extract in the other. In addition to these injections liver extract and vitamin B complex were given by mouth together with a liberal diet including the other vitamins. Where there was a lack of iron in the blood, iron too was given.

Improvement was shown by the improved disposition of the child. "Instead of a whiny fretful infant the baby became more easily handled, more active and more alert to his surroundings. Nearly all of these children gained weight and in doing so the color of skin improved." If blood was thin this treatment improved it also.

Failure to improve under this treatment resulted when the children were attacked by some infection, acute or chronic.

WHO WANTS TO BE MAYOR?

By HAL BOYLE

Liblar, Germany (AP)—Some men seek public office and others have it thrust upon them.

One of the latter is Capt. C. P. Echerd, mayor of this mining town of 4,000 Germans "by appointment."

"And the sooner they find someone else to take it over the better I will like it," said the young Greensboro, N. C., infantry officer who became military governor because there was nobody to whom he could turn over the job.

Now for 12 hours a day—until the evening curfew confines the citizens to their homes—the captain is beset with Liblar's civic woes and ambushed on every hand by German civilians with personal problems. And all Echerd wants to do is to get the war over and get back to North Carolina.

"This morning there were 200 people waiting to see me," he sighed, "and all of them had complaints."

They crowded around the drawling, unhappy officer and began singing the blues, to wit:

"Somebody stole my bicycle."

"I need a doctor."

"Can I go feed my cows and chickens outside of town?"

"Somebody stole 136,000 marks I hid in a coal mine."

Intermediary for Echerd is his German-born interpreter, Sgt. H. W. Hirsch of 120 West 17th street, New York city, who left the Reich before the Gestapo began breaking bones on a fulltime basis. With his help and the assistance of the village priest who has been named acting burgomeister, Echerd has been able to restore some order.

But he still has to find a solution for everything from an emergency problem in obstetrics to a Polish girl's aching tooth.

"We moved all German families out of the section of town occupied by our troops," Echerd said, "and at least ten times a day some housewife comes in wanting permission to go back to her home. They want to get another blanket or pick up the baby's cough syrup.

"Most Germans are cooperative and obey army regulations strictly. They don't really have much choice in the matter.

"The only one that made us really mad was a young German girl who came in, held up her hand and called out 'Heil Hitler'," continued Echerd. "She really had us flabbergasted for a minute. But it was just force of habit with her. She wasn't trying to invite trouble."

Some Germans still find it difficult to adjust themselves to the fact that the Polish, Russian and French war prisoners and labor slaves they have been exploiting for so long are no longer underdogs.

"When we first came in one Pole had been badly beaten up by the Gestapo," said the captain. "When he went to a German doctor he was refused treatment because he was a Pole. Our army medics fixed him up. But that German doctor will be dealt with."

In a case like that—where he can give a first hand lesson in justice—Echerd doesn't mind being mayor at all.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Bennett

Washington—If ever a fellow got into a job he wasn't expecting, it's J. A. Krug, chief of the War Production Board.

The rumor constantly floats around that W.P.B. now is under the thumb of Army and Navy and that Krug isn't more than a rubber stamp. But if Krug is anybody's rubber stamp, it would be something that isn't in the book.

In the first place, he's a good six-foot-three, 240 pounds of man and doesn't play tiddley-winks when it comes to making decisions.

He has been in government work quite a while, is referred to around here as a "career man," in Kentucky and Wisconsin he was in public utilities, and came into government by way of the Federal Communications Commission. He was sent from there to the Tennessee Valley Authority. For awhile before he took over at W.P.B., he was in the Navy.

When former W.P.B. Chairman Donald Nelson and Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson had their big split-up last summer, Krug was recalled from the Navy to take charge.

At that time it appeared that Germany might fold any day, and the battle for reconversion was hot and heavy. Krug was to be the "reconversion man." He kept his promise; to eliminate internal dissension.

But his big job was to start the wheels of civilian industry rolling again. He made a start, but then what happened?

The Germans began the counter offensive that temporarily set us back on our heels.

Previous calculations of need for military material went into the ashcan. The man who was appointed to help the nation reconvert to private industry discovered he had the biggest production job of the war on his hands.

Krug has had to turn handsprings since then. He had wanted to lessen government control but, instead, he had to tighten it and set new and astronomical war production figures.

W.P.B. hasn't always met schedules since Krug has taken over. How could it, with Army and Navy brass hats changing their demands almost every week? Also labor played coy in half a dozen key war industries and strikes slowed things down.

The fact remains that W.P.B., under "Cap" Krug, has come so close to meeting schedules that when the chips are down in the investigating committees those shortages at the front will be laid on somebody else's doorstep, not W.P.B.'s.

Krug has been called a New Dealer, but if he is he doesn't practice it. He's not a "big business man," but he's not against big business. His idea mostly seems to be "get the job done," whatever it is.

Republicans to Influence Frisco Conference Toward Maximum Improvement of Dumbarton Oaks Plan

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, March 20—The criticisms heard about the Dumbarton Oaks plan are by no means sufficient to warrant defeat of ratification by the U. S. Senate. Rather, the Dumbarton Oaks plan is regarded on Capitol Hill as a desirable minimum and efforts will be made by Republican leaders to influence the San Francisco conference toward maximum improvement—to go farther to safeguard peace. The trend is toward more and not less international collaboration and hence the fight of the early 1920's in the Senate is not to be paralleled.

But it is important to note that what has been published officially as the text of the Dumbarton Oaks plan is not really the charter or Constitution at all but merely a set of principles. The value of the plan will be better judged when the conference sits down to put into statutory or charter language the various obligations at present enumerated only in the form of hopes and expressions of desirable objectives.

Thus the Dumbarton Oaks text frequently declares that the Security Council "should be empowered" and members "should" do various things but this is far different from the final language which must state explicity that, in signing the treaty, member states are obligated to do certain things or agree to refrain from taking certain steps.

The fact that satutory language has not yet been drafted accounts to some extent for the misinterpretation by critics or excessive claims of enthusiasts so often noted with respect to the language of the Dumbarton Oaks plan in comparisons with the explicit provisions of the League of Nations covenant. The text of Dumbarton Oaks, for instance, expresses the belief that the members should not resort to force and should submit their disputes to the Security Council but the statutory language in the old league covenant defines specifically this obligation of each member. All members of the old league agreed in the covenant to wait three months after a league council report on a dispute before resorting to war and the council was given at least six months to investigate. The Dumbarton Oaks plan lists as a "principle" that members "shall refrain from the threat or use of force." It will be interesting to see how this is phrased in the final charter, whether as a hope or a prohibition.

Likewise, in the old league a majority of the council, irrespective or whether all the big powers concurred, could decide to publish the report and recommendations on how to settle a dispute in the hope, of course, of bringing publicity and moral force to bear on a possible aggressor, and in such decisions parties to the dispute were not allowed to vote. Under the new voting procedure agreed on at Yalta, the five permanent members of the Security Council of eleven must be unanimous without counting the parties to the dispute who are not allowed to vote. Clearly here is a chance for a constructive amendment so as to give any majority of the eleven members of the council, apart from the disputants, an opportunity to make public the recommendations as an instrument of moral force in preventing war.

These "procedural" questions are of paramount importance as anyone who observed the work of the Geneva league can testify. Governments seeking territorial or economic expansion will use every procedural loophole not only to get their own way but to prevent other governments from interfering. The threats to world peace in Ethiopia and Manchuria and the long delays in getting league action in those controversies illustrate the capacity for misuse of even so comprehensive a machinery as the covenant provided. Reform, therefore, might well come in the direction of tightening up the loopholes left by the old league practices. That is why the creation of even more loopholes, as the vague language of the Dumbarton Oaks principles certainly permits, will be deplored.

The assumption that a big nation that wants to disregard peace will do so anyhow is a truism. But in mobilizing free men to fight an aggressor state, the making of a record which clearly outlines wrong behavior and places the blame squarely on an aggressor for refusal to follow the published recommendations of an impartial tribunal helps immeasurably the cause of the victims of aggression.

It is important that no procedural process shall be allowed which can keep a question affecting peace from being investigated by the Security Council, and there should be a requirement too that no nation shall use force at least until nine months after the dispute has been submitted to the council. This is in line with many treaties which the United States has signed, beginning in 1913. The principle of a "cooling-off" period has been widely recognized as constructive.

How to Use Forcing Frames in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Association

FORCING frames, hotbeds or cold frames, can be important adjuncts to the Victory garden providing they are properly used. Although the proper use of frames is simple and easy to learn, it is important.

The most important requirements are watering, ventilation and covering. There is little need of watering, however, when the frame is closed and the weather cold. As soon as ventilation becomes necessary, then watering also becomes necessary, usually once a day. Keep the soil in the frame moist, but not soaking wet.

Ventilating by raising the sash is essential as the days become warm and sunny. It becomes even more essential as the temperature rises. The sash should be lowered, of course, before the temperature begins to drop late in the afternoon.

Certain accessories, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, are useful in the proper care and regulation of frames. Lath mashes, as illustrated, can be used to give partial shade for the plants. Straw or burlap mats can be used to place over the sash, as illustrated, when seedlings need protection from intense sunshine. Mats are also useful for night protection of frames when the weather turns extremely cold.

A simple but useful gadget as an aid in regulating ventilation of a frame is the notched block of wood, illustrated in the Garden-Graph. The use of this notched block permits step-by-step raising of the sash to various heights.

Since seedling plants must always be protected against cold winds, it is advisable on cold, windy days to raise the sash very slightly.

Williams Fellowship Elects New Officers

The Roger Williams Fellowship of the First Baptist Church held a supper meeting in the church parlors Sunday evening, March 18.

Following the supper election of officers for the coming year took place. Those elected were: Lester Decker, president; Miss Ethel Hull, vice-president; Miss Alice Hunter, secretary; and Charles Gumser, treasurer. Plans for the coming year were also discussed.

Comments were made on the successful monthly forums which the Roger Williams Fellowship has sponsored since its organization a year ago. The club decided that it would also in the future emphasize the fellowship and social phase of its program.

The next meeting is regularly scheduled for April 8. The program committee which will make plans for this meeting consists of Paul Jones, chairman, Miss Dora Pratt and George B. Matthews.

The nominating committee which presented the list of officers for the acceptance of the group consisted of Mrs. George B. Matthews, Mrs. Erwin E. Craw and Sherwood F. Lasher.

Mrs. Vernon Hull Entertains Sorosis, Gives Paper for Study

Sorosis met with Mrs. Vernon Hull, 259 Smith avenue, Monday afternoon, and Mrs. Hull gave the paper on Iceland. She described the island as being the fourth largest in the North Atlantic, a little smaller than the state of Pennsylvania.

About one-quarter of the island is inhabited because of its volcanic rock nature and the central ice plateau. It lies about 180 miles from the nearest coast of Greenland and its largest city, Reykjavik on the western coast is 500 miles from Norway. In its history it is believed that the Greeks landed there about 325 B.C. and Columbus in 1476. The people are descendants of the Scandanavians and are noted for their literature and Christianity. All of the people work for themselves and are neither high class or low class.

In 1874 Denmark granted the people a constitution and agreed to share the power of the king with the Althing, their assembly which resembles Parliament, and is composed of 36 members. At the beginning of the present war Britain decided to take over the country and in June, 1944, gave them a republican constitution.

Education is being developed and in 1911 the University of Reykjavik was established. In the early times the parents taught the children and the ministers instructed in the rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic. The main church is Lutheran. Many of the people go abroad to study and physical culture is an important item. Skiing and skating are included in the curriculum when the weather permits. The temperature ranges from seven degrees below zero to the average climate of San Francisco. There is perpetual daylight between May and August and the health conditions of the country with the exception of tuberculosis and the dangers of fishing are such that it has almost the lowest death rate of any country in the world. At first there was little medical care on the island but now there is a modern hospital and improved methods of combatting disease.

In parts of the country are geysers with streams of hot water shooting as high as 125 feet into the air. Bringing these under control the people are now developing systems whereby the hot water is piped and used to warm the soil in the gardens and also for heating the homes. Mrs. Hull also spoke of the beautiful scenery and Mrs. Fred Ertel exhibited a number of snapshops taken on the islands.

Next week the meeting will be held at 3:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Howard A. Lewis, 12 West Chestnut street when movies will be shown.

Olympian Club Assigns Program For Next Year's Subjects

Olympian Club was entertained Monday evening by Miss Anna Mae Decker, 15 Lafayette avenue. The usual business proceedings opened the meeting. Dates for next year's program were assigned to members and each handed to the program committee the subject of the paper she had decided to give during the coming year.

Because of the absence of Miss Sullivan who was to give the paper for the evening, an impromptu program was substituted. This was followed by a quiz conducted by Miss Rena Finn.

During the social hour at the close of the program the hostess served refreshments in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. The next meeting will be April 9 at the home of Miss Winifred Sullivan, 45 Walnut street.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "Children Are People," etc.)

No questions are less satisfactory to answer than those which concern the length of time of a young widow's seclusion. A letter before me now asks: "Could you please tell me what the convention is in regard to a widow going out with another man? My husband was killed overseas last summer and there is someone who wants to take me out. But we do not know whether the convention is six months or a year. Does the fact that my little girl, aged three, and I have lived alone for two years make any difference?"

In answer to this, less than a year is considered shorter than "conventionally approved" time. However, I think the fact that you have been living alone for so long a time does make a difference. Another time-lengthening effect is change of season. In other words September was still summer—April will be almost summer again. A still more important consideration is the type of man he is and where you go.

If you go to the movies or occasionally to dine with a man of good reputation, especially one who, should you marry him later in the coming summer, would give you and your child the advantage of a home, those who have your welfare at heart could not do other than approve. But if he has an unsettled reputation, going out dancing with him so soon after your husband's death would almost certainly bring unpleasant criticism of your lack of heart.

Present-Taking and Tip-Giving

Dear Mrs. Post: I am to be the week-end guest of the parents of a girl friend, who lives in another state. I know from what has been said in our conversation that there is a maid in their house. Shall I give her something when I leave or do I send this to her, or for her, when I return home? Also, should I take a gift for the mother or send one after I return home?

Answer: You should give the maid a tip just before you leave, and at the same time thank her and say goodbye. The amount depends a good deal upon your purse and the extra work your visit made for her. A typical amount would be $1 to one who did no pressing for you, or $2 if she gave you much personal service. The other exaction of etiquette is that you write a thank-you note to the mother of your friend as soon as you return home. Do not send a present with this note. (If you would like to do so, you might take a box of candy intended for everyone when you go.) Many people think this well-meant gesture suggests payment of hospitality. Not many, of course, but enough to make it an unwise plan.

Do you know the correct form for a thank-you letter? Send for Mrs. Post's leaflet, "Model Notes," in care of Kingston Daily Freeman, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y., and inclose a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Prosperous Northeast Predicted by DuMond

Albany, N. Y., March 20 (AP)—An agriculturally prosperous postwar northeast is predicted by the state commissioner of agriculture and markets.

Telling Delmar Kiwanis Club members that "adequate farm production" would prevent inflation "in the field of food" and would benefit both the farmer and consumer, C. Chester Du Mond said last night:

"Given fair to good weather conditions, we can expect agricultural prosperity."

He cited intelligent use of grasslands and improvement in distribution methods as other factors.

Du Mond asserted the farmer must "produce more food and do it cheaper" in order to have the income to purchase "more and better products" in the industrial field.

"On the other hand, I believe high wages will continue in the postwar industrial field and this in turn will continue the demand for food in ever increasing quantity and quality," he added.

Pelly Buys Automobile, But Reports It Missing

The police were called on a missing auto case Monday night at 8:10 o'clock and ran into an ownership tangle which they are endeavoring to solve.

Meyer Pelly of 130 Pearl street, manager of Empire Auto Sales, 527 Broadway, reported buying a 1934 sedan from Luigi Vandelli of 46 Washington avenue, but the car was not around when he called for it.

Vandelli said the auto was standing in the rear of his home at 7:30 Monday, but evidently had been removed by an unknown party. He valued it at $200.

Patrolmen Brophy and Boulouxos detailed to check on the car reported that they found it at the junk yard of James Van Allen on Murphy street. Van Allen told the police that it had been turned in to him by John Lowe, Jr., on January 18 for another car and a $50 trade allowance.

Will Resist Move To Recess Senate During Conference

most Republicans will want the Senate in session while the security conference is in progress so there may be discussion of any developments at San Francisco.

Senator Vandenberg (R.-Mich.) said the American delegation, of which he is a member, will plunge into 10 days of intensive work just before it leaves for San Francisco.

During that time the delegates also may decide what advisors will accompany them.

Vandenberg said he was informed that John Foster Dulles, foreign affairs adviser to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in the last presidential campaign, would be in San Francisco as representative of a church peace group he heads.

Vandenberg and Dulles have consulted frequently in the past on foreign affairs questions, and the Michigan senator said it is not a bad guess that they would do so again.

Three Sailors Are Held For Theft of Automobile

Charged with stealing the station wagon of Judson George, 116 North street, Middletown, Friday night, three sailors stationed at Harriman Naval Hospital, waived examination on charges of grand larceny before City Judge Edmund C. Faulkner on Saturday and were committed to Goshen Jail to await grand jury action.

The three, arrested after a chase on Route 17 near Bates Gates, were: James Sarno, nineteen, Donald Shaffer, eighteen and Joseph Ventura, twenty. Police said that Sarno and Shaffer had been involved in an earlier auto theft at Harriman.

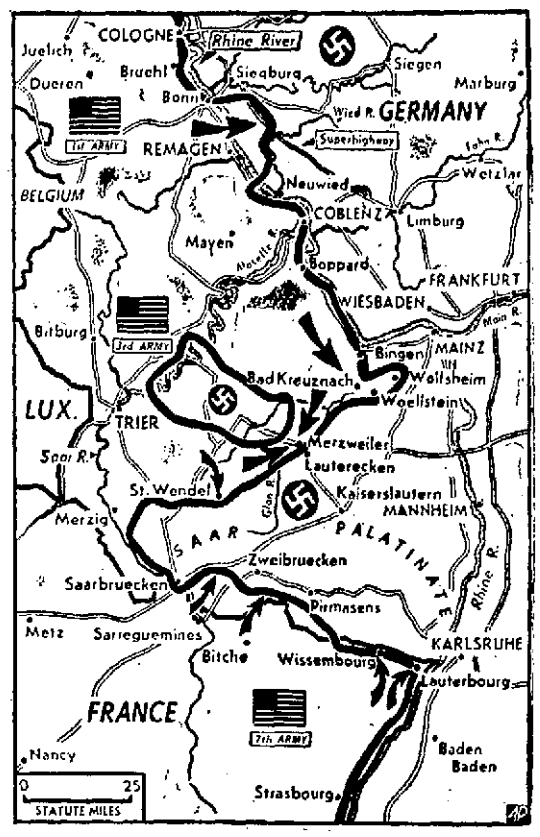
YANKS ENCIRCLE GERMAN FORCES



Arrows indicate drives of Allied troops on the western front. American units met at Merzweiler to trap by encirclement a considerable number of German troops as other American forces took Wolfsheim and Woellstein in a drive aimed at Mainz. The Rhine bridgehead was expanded, St. Wendel fell, progress was made to the northwest of Zweibruecken and other units neared Karlsruhe.

Patton's Third Flanks Lines

menaced by a number of Third Army armored columns moving from several directions, and by the Seventh Army moving up from the south more slowly while still negotiating the Siegfried Line, Gen. Eisenhower's communique noted that the Siegfried Line has been breached in a least a dozen places between Saarbruecken and the Rhine.

Wissembourg, Lautersbourg, nine miles west of Karlsruhe, and Altenstadt all fell to the Seventh. The last Germans had been chased from French soil except for the long by-passed garrisons totaling about 137,000 men in the Atlantic and channel ports.

Nearing Mainz

The nearest American approach to Mainz was at the outskirts of Bubenheim, a village 12 miles from Weisbaden and 29 from the ninth largest city of Frankfurt on the Main.

Two traps were being fashioned by the Third and Seventh Armies: a minor snare had been thrown around 2,000 Germans east of Trier. The larger pocket was near the center of the Palatinate.

The smaller pocket, west of and within the larger trap, was being shut on the Saar district itself. Last official reports said Third Army troops which had conquered St. Wendel were within ten miles of the Seventh Army forces around Zweibruecken.

It was this smaller trap which unverified reports said had been closed, and it contained the greatest concentration of war industries the Germans had west of the Rhine.

Once again, the Fourth Armored (breakthrough) Division was spearheading the Palatinate breakthrough and was closest to Kaiserslautern. Patton's divisions had overrun numerous supply depots, and scores of vehicles intact but with empty gasoline tanks. The Germans jammed roads east of Kaiserslautern bumper to bumper, and these columns were being cut up by American planes.

The First Army's second captured airfield east of the Rhine was southeast of Eudenbach in the rugged state forest in the Seven Mountains country—a favorite for tourists. Enemy resistance was wiped out in night battles. The airfield is large enough to handle transport planes.

Small gains were made all along the 35-mile perimeter of the "windfall" salient although the Germans were persistent with rockets, artillery and self-propelled cannon.

On the north of the bridgehead, the infantry drove into Obercassel, 17 miles from the Ruhr, and 19½ miles from the southern extremity of the bridgehead below Hammerstein. Bennert, Wiese and Heisterhacheroff—all opposite Bad Godesberg and at the start of the Bonn plain—were taken.

The Ninth Division took Hungsberg, 7½ miles east of the Rhine and near Windhagen.

Mighty Carriers Bomb Japan

countered on the road to Cordova, but otherwise the area was surprisingly free of Japanese. Fliers scanned the country behind the beachhead in search of enemy positions, but found none.

Other Yank forces landed the same day on Malamaui islet 12 miles south of the southwestern tip of Mindanao. Malamaui is adjacent to the much larger Basilan Island, which was invaded Friday.

Recent mopping up operations in the Zambales mountains of northwestern Luzon by Brig. Gen. William Chase's 38th Division yielded an additional 2,654 Japanese dead. This area generally is west of the Clark Field section bordering the central Luzon plain.

Despite poor visibility, strong formations of heavy bombers raked Formosa airdromes and other installations with 249 tons of explosives. Other Liberators hit Borneo airfields with 118 tons.

Join 'Y' Free

Two discharged veterans, David Freer and James E. Lawrence, neighbors residing near the Y.M.C.A., received three months' free membership, a courtesy extended to returned servicemen, Monday night. So far, 47 veterans have been given complimentary memberships in the "Y".

Russians Smash On in Hungary

opened coastal dikes, flooding the lowlands in efforts to halt a Soviet extermination push.

The German high command declared the Third Ukrainian Army lashing out northwest of Budapest had carried beyond Tata, 12 miles from Komarom, German stronghold on the Danube's south bank at the Hungarian-Slovakian frontier. Komarom is 45 miles northwest of Budapest, and 84 miles from Vienna.

The Nazi command also said Germans had withdrawn across the Drava river on the Hungarian-Yugoslav frontier farther south, but did not specify the location. The Drava runs along the southwestern border of Hungary.

Neustadt is 25 miles west of the Oder river and but three from the Czechoslovak frontier. Berlin said the Russians were attacking along an 80-mile front in the offensive to overrun remaining German factories in industrialized Silesia.

The German pocket southwest of Koenigsberg now had been shaved to little more than 100 square miles—about 18 long and seven from the sea it its deepest point—with Russians within one and three miles respectively of Braunsberg and Heiligenbeil, the enemy's last two major towns.

A Red Star dispatch said the Germans opened dikes of the Frisches Haff or lagoon, flooding an inland basin below sea level where "frightened German soldiers are unable to put up an organized resistance and many are throwing away their guns and fleeing."
